Caucuses Held In Woodhull

Exciting Race for Highway Superintendent on Republican Ticket Herrington and McCaslin Oppose For Supervisor.

The Woodhull town caucus Saturday was one of the most largely attended ever held there. Most interest seemed to be centered in the superintendent of highways nominations, for which there were four candidates, Charles Kilmer, Willard Hotaling, Mr. Bliss and John Miller. After the first vote Mr. Bliss withdrew from the race; after the second vote, Mr. Kilmer withdrew, which left Mr. Hotaling and Mr. Miller running strong. At the last vote Mr. Miller won the nomination.

The nominations follow: supervisor, Roy W. Herrington, town clerk, Frank S. Park; justice of peace, Carl B. Carpenter; justice of peace, Adelbert J. Colvin; superintendent of highways, John P. Miller.

Assessors, W. A. Smith and George Bouton; collector, Mrs. Minnie Cilley; school director, Mrs. Myrtle Hurd; trustees of the cemetery association, Frank Park, Asa T. Smith and W. A. Smith.

Mrs. Eva Allen Dies Suddenly

Mrs. Eva T. Allen, long time resident of Addison, died unexpectedly at her home on Tuscarora Street sometime Monday night, October, 2, 1933. Mrs. Allen had been ill for several weeks with the shingles, but after consulting her doctor on Monday, remarked to a friend that she believed she was getting well. Tuesday morning a neighbor, Mrs. Hattie Sly, going to the house to inquire how Mrs. Allen felt, was unable to arouse her. Frank Hess was summoned, and entrance made to the house through a window, when it was discovered she had passed away during the night. Apparently death came quietly as she slept, probably at two or three o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Allen would have been 76 years of age November 17 of this year. She was born somewhere in New England, her maiden name being Eva Thomas. When a young girl she came to Addison to live with an aunt, Mrs. Isaac Hibbard. She married Egbert Allen, who was an undertaker in Addison, Mr. Allen dying December 18, 1893. They had no children. For many years Mrs. Allen acted as bookkeeper for the late P. C. Daniels, who conducted an insurance and real estate business here. Later she became librarian of the Addison Public Library, a position she held capably for 15 years, until ill health caused her to resign.

Mrs. Allen was an active member of the Addison Baptist Church, attending faithfully to her church duties throughout her life. She was also a member of the W. C. T. U. and the Sherwood Class of the Baptist Church A sweet character, although bereft of those dearest to her early in life, Mrs. Allen concealed the hardships of life behind a brave smile, and was known everywhere she went by her cheery disposition.

Mrs. Allen is survived by no near relatives. She leaves four cousins, Lester Hibbard and Hudson Hibbard of Los Angeles, Cal., Mrs. E. M. Wright of Lewiston, Maine, and Mrs. C. L. Hibbard of Binghamton.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Burial will be made in Addison Cemetery.

Who Remembers October 2, 1853?

Who can remember what the weather was October 2, 1853? Not many persons, it is safe to say. But Mrs. Eunice Bates of the Addison-Woodhull road remembers.

"Grandma" Bates well remembers that day seventy years ago. There was a cold rain in the morning, and the ground was white with snow. After the storm the snow melted, and three weeks of beautiful weather followed. How does she remember that particular day so distinctly? It was her wedding day, and who would forget their wedding day, even though they could look back upon it over a span of almost three-quarters of a century!

The bride was Eunice Miller, and she married Eli Bates seventy years ago Monday, the Rev. Rice tieing the knot.

Mrs. Bates was 97 last February, and she has two sons, Frank Bates with whom she makes her home, and E. P. Bates residing near Woodhull.

Renken to Accept Milk Surplus

Will Turn all Surplus Milk Into Butter — Price for Surplus Milk Will Be Considerably Less.

According to announcement yesterday by the State Milk Control Board, which has been seeking to maintain a market for all dairy farmers, one large company which had expected to reduce its intake of milk had found it possible to continue accepting all milk offered by its 190 patrons in New York and Pennsylvania.

According to announcement M. H. Renken Company was the company referred to. In addition to the plant in Addison, there are other plants at Frankfort and Millers Mills, Herkimer County; Marshall and Westfield, N. Y.

The Renken Company will turn all its surplus milk into butter, the Board announcement said. "Under the classified plan now in effect, dairymen will receive considerably less money for the milk used in butter", the statement continued, "but they will retain a market."

Addison Young Man Writes Of His Impressions of France

At Request of ADVERTISER George Farnham, Junior at Princeton and Student of International Affairs, Sets Forth Impressions Gained During Summer of Intensive Studies on Continent.

In our last week's issue we announced the return of George Farnham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Farnham, from a summer in France and his resumption of studies at Princeton University, where he is a junior in the school of international affairs. It was also announced that Mr. Farnham had kindly consented to favor the ADVERTISER with a specially prepared article, setting forth his personal impressions of France and its people.

By virtue of his studies, both at Princeton and abroad, and his experiences and travel in France and other European countries, Mr. Farnham is exceptionally well equipped to treat authoratively of the subject at hand. We feel that his article will be read with interest by the great majority of those receiving this paper.

His article follows:

FRANCE AND THE FRENCH VIEWPOINT

By George Farnham

Many Americans, either because we have taken a hurried trip thru it, or because we have had to listen to the tiresome stories of those who have, see France as the gay, beautiful, pleasantly immoral city of Paris surrounded by a picturesque countryside. That obviously is not the real France. Some of us think of France as a cultured land of art and refinement, while others of us see her as a great militaristic power dominating Europe with her victorious armies; but in either case we are wrong for such a France exists for only a student of history. I suppose, however, that most friends of France today sympathize with her because they still picture her as the helpless and innocent victim of Germany's war of aggression; that France does not exist today nor did it ever. Among the critics of the French, those who protest against her recent defaults on her war debt repayment raise the greatest cry, but they have shown that they do not understand the problem by their inability to explain how repayment is to be effected. Still others of us condemn her for we have heard of her immorality, of her money marriages and of her rumored dishonesty; but again this does not give a true picture of her people.

What, then, is the true picture? I do not presume to know. The canvas is too large, with coloring too delicate and shades too changing for any one individual to comprehend it fully. A rough sketch, however, is possible, a mere outline of what seems to be the outstanding points of weakness and strength, taking the nation as a whole.

That her population, regardless of vocation or social status, comes from peasant stock is all important. To be sure, a few aristocrats remain, but revolutions, wars, birth control and taxations have so thinned their ranks as to make them impotent in formulating French policies. In the meantime, the prolific peasant has been working his way into the positions recently vacated by aristocrats. This accounts for the crudeness, even among those of high position, that is such a surprise for Anglo-Saxons who generally know more of ancient France than of the modern nation. But there are more important effects than mere crudeness in behavior. Now we can understand more easily why she has men of such low calibre in her government, why during the spirited debate in the legislature inkwells and heavy books are flung back and forth between the disputants, and why the French can boast that they have not an honest man in parliament. It will go far toward explaining why French policy is so short sighted; it is the product of a peasant's mind which, crafty and cunning as it often is, is never farsighted. They believe firmly in universal manhood suffrage, they know that in France every man does take advantage of his franchise, and yet they allow over seventy per cent of their young men to become of age each year without being able even so much as to sign their own names.

France is above all a nation of the little man. Her struggles against the tyrannical Bourbons and the ambitious Napoleons are too fresh in her mind for her to tolerate an overlordship whether it be that of a dictator, or banker and big capitalists. You reply that her public utilities are controlled by big trusts and that at times her munition manufacturers appear more influential than the Quai d'Orsay in foreign policy. While the charge is partially true, these are decidedly exceptions and are thoroughly hated and distrusted by the people.

Church Street Crossing May Be Eliminated

At a Public Service Commission hearing held at the Court house in Corning last week it was practically decided that no crossing elimination project would be undertaken in Addison village. It was pointed out that grade crossings in the village could not be satisfactorily eliminated at a reasonable cost to all parties concerned. Officials of the Erie Railroad, representatives of the village and of the county supported the recommendation offered by the State Department that the proceedings, instituted about a year ago, be dropped.

It was suggested at the hearing that the Wall street crossing should be eliminated. This was objected to in behalf of the village, although it is probable that the Church street crossing will be eliminated as no objection to this was interposed. The grade crossing elimination project for Addison thus goes back to its original status and will be taken up at some future time by the State Department.

It was also suggested by the Board of Trustees of the village that all illuminated "slow" signs be placed on the north side of Front street between the Church street intersection and the so-called Jones Square.

Deputy Commissioner C. R. Chase presided at the hearing which was attended by Attorney Charles L. Crane of Addison; Supervisor George McKinley, representing the county; H. F. Brumm, state engineer; S. B. Ehrenick of the State Highway Department at Hornell; W. J. Foster of the Erie Railroad; Mr. Murphy, trainmaster at Hornell; and Attorney James Canny of New York.

CAUCUS

Last Saturday evening both the Republican and Democratic parties in Addison nominated candidates for town offices. With one exception, both parties will have a full, partisan slate in the field this fall. The exception being that the Republicans did not nominate a candidate for justice of the peace in opposition to John M. Northrup, present Democratic encumbent and nominee of the Democrats.

As far as personalities are concerned, this paper has nothing whatsover against any candidate of the Democratic party. Their slate from Elmer Hawkins for Supervisor, right on down through the list, is made up of fine, substantial citizens of the town. However, this paper which has in the past been Republican, will continue to support the nominees of the Republican party in the 1933 fall election.

Even if this paper were entirely independent in policy, it is hard for the publishers to see how they could do otherwise than endorse the leading figures on this year's Republican ticket. In the first place the nominee for Supervisor, Walter M. Goff, is the most widely known, thoroughly experienced man connected with Steuben County governmental affairs. As such he has been recognized by other members, for the several years he has been elected chairman of the county board, bespeak greatest confidence in his efficient handling of county problems. With Addison the home of the chairman of the board, voters of the town would be foolish to supplant him with another supervisor, no matter how popular the opposition candidate might be, personally.

There are still other reasons why the people of Addison must stand firm with their Republican majorities for town and state offices. This year the State of New York is at the cross roads. Tammany wealth and influence has gradually eaten up-state like a canker, and today the only barriers that stop the Tiger's henchmen from complete domination of governmental affairs are the New York State Assembly and our Republican board of supervisor. Once let the Democrats gain control of both houses of the legislature with the governorship, all hope of home rule in up-state counties must be abandoned. Residents of the country districts would sit hopelessly with their hands tied behind their backs, as Tammany appointees would swarm in to take charge of local governmental affairs, like the carpet baggers invaded the South after the Civil War.

Republicans and Democrats alike, must stand firmly together to repulse this invasion of the rights of our people up-state, to elect their own officers and administrate their own governmental affairs in an economical manner. Let us strengthen the bars and keep the Tiger out of Steuben County, lest he bankrupt this section as he has bankrupted the great city of New York.

THE TAX-EXEMPT ARMY

With the emergency and national relief and recovery legislation that has been passed, government has launched itself into practically every field of endeavor. The scope of its power is so wide that private citizens and industries do not yet know how they will be affected—in fact government departments are not fully conversant with their own powers.

In the administration of the new legislation affecting business and agriculture and in the expenditure of the billions of dollars that have been appropriated for new governmental functions, tens of thousands of individuals will become the beneficiaries of public funds.

It is probably not an exaggeration to say that in another five years millions of citizens may be classed as public servants with all or part of their salaries tax-exempt under the privilege legislation that attaches to their position.

This army of office-holders will gain constantly greater power in elections to perpetuate their own jobs, which while inaugurated as "relief" measures will stand every chance of becoming permanent burdens on tax-payers, who are not granted federal exemptions.

During the present depression emergency seeds are being sown which may produce dragon teeth in the harvest. The people may face another emergency in the very near future of controlling the overhead and expansion of government which was created to meet the unemployment emergency. Now is the time to "check and double check" on our future course.

THE OLD POLITICAL GAME

That it is next to impossible to beat an old politician at his own game, will doubtless be exemplified by what is happening in New York City this fall. For the Tammany Tiger, discredited by nine out of ten Democrats as well as Republicans, dead broke through waste of public funds, backing a worn dish-rag of a candidate for its highest office, still bids fair to re-elect that spineless nonentity, O'Brien, mayor of the city.

As unpopular as Walker was idolized, as inefficient as the Dapper One was profligate, the mayor of New York a few weeks ago seemed fairly on the skids, sliding to defeat. Yet all that is changed now, and the late adroit move of those high up in the councils of the party which has ruled the city and state so long and expensively, gives strong promise of continuing the Tiger in power.

During McKee's short term as mayor, the city enjoyed the most efficient rule it has experienced in years. The trouble was, the rule was altogether too efficient and the paunch of Tammany began to wax lean as the reign of economy dried up the easy money which ordinarily makes life such a garden of bliss for the favored of the Tiger. O'Brien was made the machine candidate and McKee drew into seclusion. Yet so popular was the short term mayor with thinking Democrats and many Republicans, he received more than a quarter of a million votes written in on the ballots.

McKee then withdrew from politics, and despite the popular clamor that he run for mayor this fall, remained adamant to all the pleas. Then LaGuardia, the former Congressman, was nominated on a Republican, fusion ticket which threatened to sweep the unpopular O'Brien out of office in spite of almost unbreakable influence of Tammany. With the city treasury broke, the populace disgusted with a reign of waste and corruption which caused the calling of a special session of the Legislature to attempt solving New York's debt problem, straws began to point to O'Brien's defeat.

Tammany was desperate, and when a Tiger is desperate he will devour anything from a hyena to a mouse. Indications were strong that for the first time in years New York City would be led by a Republican mayor, and that turn in the tide might easily mean the election of a Republican Governor in 1934. Down in Washington it is no secret among the "wise ones", that if Roosevelt is re-elected in 1936 Jim Farley will go after the New York State governorship as a stepping stone towards the Presidency in 1940. Thus it is easy to see that any break in the Democratic cogs in New York City, would be a dire threat against the administration carrying out any such shifting of the mantle of office.

Something had to be done, so it was logical that the administration's chief fixer, Farley, should go into a huddle with New Yorkers. And the result of that huddle is the candidacy of McKee for mayor on an INDEPENDENT DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM. Very cunning indeed—for if McKee's popularity can swing the election he will be absolutely divorced from the Republican party, yet the administration will still have its party ally in the metropolis.

The result? Probably with two candidates drawing from the disgruntled vote of New York, O'Brien will be re-elected, Tammany will be happy again and the administration's worries for the future will not be serious. As for McKee, it is hard to visualize just what he is to gain from the affair. It is reasonable to suppose so smart a man as McKee must know he would have stood a far better chance of election this year running as a fusion Republican-independent Democrat candidate, that will be the case in a three cornered race with Tammany holding the best cards against him.

McKee had a fine opportunity to show what a big man he could be, by openly bucking the Tiger. He passed up that chance and later went into this "deal" which is bound to make most people suspicious. For this McKee-Administration-Tammany deal, stinks to high heaven of the rankest kind of machine politics, whatever is to be McKee's ultimate reward.

DESTROY FIRE TRAPS—BUILD NOW

The amazing decline in property values has caused many owners to allow homes and places of business to fall into extremely poor condition.

No attitude could be more in error. Buildings in a state of disrepair are wide open invitations to fire. They are a constant menace to the community and the neighborhood. Insurance losses are paid on the basis of today's property values, which in most instances are far below original cost.

It is in the interest of every property owner to maintain buildings modernized and in good condition, free from accumulations of rubbish.

These things can be done now at the lowest cost in decades. They not only help to eliminate the chance of fire, but give the owner needed improvements at rock-bottom bargain prices—prices which won't be in effect much longer. Best of all, the expenditures made provide needed employment, both in the home community and in industries supplying building materials. They help stimulate purchasing power — the great national need of the moment.

Remember that it's cheaper to keep a building in repair than to put up a new one when it has entirely gone to seed or been destroyed by fire—and remember too that jobs are better and cheaper than charity.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare.

With the coming of fall, the NRA enters its most critical phase. It gat off to a fine start with public sentiment massed behind it. That sentiment is still there — but the novelty is beginning to wear out, the first thrill of excitement is dying down, and people are wanting to be shown. Millions of warkers are confronted by the unpleasant spectacle of rising prices unaccompanied by comparable increases in their earning capacity. Business generally believes in the NRA, wants to support it, but many do not know where to get the money. President Roosevelt points to the people that success or failure of the recovery program now rests to the greatest extent in their hands.

In line with this, the most important recent step was the NRA customer mobilization. The pledge —which found millions of signers— involves boycott of non-NRA businesses and patronage for those which display the blue eagle. There is no legal means of enforcing the pledge on a signer who breaks it— that part of the campaign really is voluntary and, as General Johnson declared, depends entirely on the public's conscience.

"What will happen to Ford?" for his failure to sign the NRA code, is being asked on every street corner. His wage and work standards are entirely in line with the code. He simply objects to signing. How much that will cost him in loss of business is an interesting and important speculation. If General Johnson has his way, Ford cars are going to be a drug on the market from now until he signs. Temporarily the Ford imbroglio has been sidetracked by controversy with the stubborn soft coal industry.

As for the early influence of the NRA on general business, it has done wonders, according to a recent review by Dun and Bradstreet. Reports from all parts of the country show enlarged spending power, stimulated employment and the disappearance of the feeling of suspense and apprehension which gripped the country for three years. Volume of business, in comparison to a year ago, has substantially increased and the forward movement is uninterrupted. New employment is put at about three million.

What is a sound loan and what isn't?" is a query that is perplexing the bankers now. They're in a tough spot. The government, through its recovery machinery, wants the banks to ease up on loans, put more money to work. Another branch of government, which does bank supervising, can swoop down and make it very unpleasant for banks which aren't as liquid as they should be under the stringent banking laws to protect depositors. The banker is trying to steer a middle course and dodge the pitfalls that lurk on either side. The suggestion of the head of the R. F. C. that banks should sell preferred stocks and use the funds to extend credit, met a respectful but coolish response. In most communities you still have to put up about $1.50 in A-1 assets to get a dollar loan, and it doesn't look as if that policy will relax to a great degree in the near future.

Financiers are keeping their eyes on the inflation clouds now, wondering how soon they will gather. Heavy pressure is being brought to bear on Mr. Roosevelt to rush inflation; It is known that he has been studying ways and means. Senator Fletcher recently suggested that the Reserve Bank be ordered to buy at least $100,000,000 worth of government bonds a week, and the Treasury should issue a like amount of new currency. Inflation would create many new problems while relieving existing ones such as lack of credit for building, business expansion, etc.

Gold producers smiled, grew jubilant, when the treasury, on presidential instruction, began to pay the world price for gold the other day. Instead of a fixed price of $20.67 per ounce, they will receive whatever the market says, and gold will rise and fall in value like other commodities. Price now is around $30.00.

The silver men weren't slow to ask that something be done to help them. Senator Pittman, long the most persistent advocate of a better break for silver, suggested that producers be allowed to take their silver to the mint and receive the coins made from it. This would bring the price of silver to $1.19 per ounce, more than three times the present market price.

Still Hope For Governor's Help To Stop N. Y. Election Frauds

Albany, Oct. 3—The advocates of an honest ballot say they have not yet given up hope of receiving help from Governor Lehman in their effort to put a stop to what has been undoubtedly the greatest violation of the election franchise ever perpetrated in this country, the frauds in New York City and Albany. Indeed, the question of honest elections promises to be a very live issue in the present campaign. And well it may be. If by any chance the Democrats were to gain control of the Assembly this fall there is no question that Tammany election methods would be extended upstate. They are already in full force in Albany. Indeed, it is pretty well understood that the Democratic plan includes the eventual abolition of election commissioners in the various counties and the appointment of a State Superintendent of Elections to sit at Albany and run elections all over the state through appointed deputies. Just what that would mean each citizen can figure out for himself.

Fraud is of Many Types

It would be difficult to conceive any type of fraud in connection with elections which has not been repeatedly perpetrated and really became a part of the regular program of the dominant political machines in New York and in this city. It includes false registrations, multiple voting by "floaters", intimidation, impersonation, slugging of voters, ringing up votes by the score then filling in fictitious names to account for them, falsely swearing to thousands of votes which were never cast. As a result the fraudulent vote of New York City last fall was estimated at not less than a quarter of a million, and it was proportionately great in Albany.

Repeated Requests for Aid

Several requests for aid in remedying this shameful situation have been made of the Governor. As early as last January a group of leading residents of New York City, including a former Attorney General of the state, the present U. S. Attorney and two of his predecessors, as well as others, called on the Governor and asked that he institute a thorough investigation of election frauds, with punishment for the guilty regardless of politics. The Governor said this should be attended to by the Attorney General of the State and the District Attorney of New York County, and promised they would do so. The Attorney General did nothing, and the district Attorney of New York county failed dismally, the only actual results in the New York City fraud cases being achieved by the U. S. Attorney of the Southern District, who was handicapped by being limited to the investigation of the vote for federal officers.

All Parties Join in Plea

At the recent special session of the Legislature another plea for aid in securing honest elections was laid before the Governor. It came from people of all parties in New York City—Democrats, Republicans, the State Chairman of the Socialist party, independents and others. They asked Mr. Lehman to recommend the enactment of laws which would do away with at least some of the frauds; it being a special session, only matters suggested by the Governor could be considered. But election reform was not among the many subjects of legislation offered by the Governor, and so none was enacted.

Lawless Primary Revives Question

Then came the primaries of September 19. This was not a case of Democrats against Republicans and Socialists, but of one faction of Democrats against another. Fraud was again rampant in New York City, but mostly "in the family" on this occasion. For the first time the voices of prominent Democrats were heard in loud complaint against election frauds. Former judges, men high in the party, said it was "shameful". It made a difference whose ox was gored. They had received a taste of what Republicans and Socialists got in wholesale measure last fall. Voters were thrown out of the election rooms, ballot boxes were openly stuffed, signatures were forged, gangsters and criminals were present at the polling places, firearms were used, and there was one murder.

Once More Action is Asked

Feeling that this shameful exhibition, in which his own political family was affected, would stir the Governor to action, Chairman W. Kingsland Macy of the Republican State Committee again asked Mr. Lehman for action, saying, among other things: "A continuation of corrupt election practices is the ruination of both political parties and the very fabric of democracy. Every decent citizen looks to you as Chief Executive of the state to prevent our election machinery from becoming a scandal and a mockery." He urged the Governor to have the Attorney General act upon his request of some days before for the appointment of a large number of responsible persons of all parties to help guard against fraud at the coming registration and election. Whether in response to this or for some other reason, the Attorney General about that time acted — ridiculously. He appointed as his deputy "to look after election matters for him", George Gordon Battle, a veteran sachem of Tammany Hall. If this was intended as a joke, it is a pretty poor one from the point of view of those who believe in honest elections.

Believe Governor Wrongly Advised

Members of both parties who favor an honest ballot are at a loss to understand the Governor's failure to act in this important matter. In the main they are inclined to attribute it to his being wrongly advised. They do not believe he realizes the extent to which the ballot frauds have stirred the state. They think, too, he may be placing confidence that is not warranted in officials whose duty it is to enforce the law. Whatever the cause of his inaction, they sincerely hope it may soon be brought to an end and the Governor may enter whole heartedly into the fight for honest elections.

to nominate him as the candidate of the Republican party for re-election to this important office."

The nomination was seconded by the Rev. John V. Axtell who spoke along the vein of his admiration for Mr. Goff as a careful administrator of public funds during these times when funds are being expended for the welfare of the unemployed. No name was presented the convention in opposition to the candidate and a unanimous vote was recorded. The vote was followed by loud applause, and a demand from Mr. Goff for a speech.

The Addison supervisor responded, voicing his appreciation for the endorsement tendered him with the nomination. In a few words Mr. Goff told of the tremendous difficulties facing a supervisor in these days when relief is called for by so many persons, and there is more need than ever for reduced taxes. He reiterated his loyalty to the town, and informed his hearers he had worked ceaselessly for the interests of the people of Addison.

Mr. Weatherby was nominated to succeed himself as town clerk, without opposition, as was Mr. Wilcox as justice. The chairman mentioned the fact that the other justice office was held by a Democrat, and that in the past the two parties had observed the courtesy of endorsing one justice from the opposition. Mr. Northrup's name was then placed before the caucus, and he was nominated without opposition.

Mr. Aumick's name for re-election was placed before the meeting by Postmaster Burrell Vastbinder, who told of the efficient work done by the superintendent of highways during his tenure of office, and his remarkable economy in building good roads. Benjamin Phillips was nominated in opposition. A ballot was taken, Mr. Aumick receiving 133 votes and Mr. Phillips 20. A motion was then offered that the vote be made unanimous, and carried enthusiastically.

Mr. Thompson was nominated assessor without opposition, Mr. Hadlock being opposed by L. J. Haynes. Mr. Hadlock receiving a large majority vote, the caucus voted to make his nomination unanimous also. Mrs. Wildrick was opposed by Mrs. C. J. Coon for collector. Mrs. Wildrick won 89 to 29, and her nomination was made unanimous. The inspectors of election were nominated without opposition.

Following the business of the caucus, Mr. Crane addressed the Republican voters on their responsibility to hold the up-state sections from the domination of Tammany.

Fruit---Flowers---Garden

Taking Care of the Harvest

The produce of the garden needs to be stored with the same care that was given to the growing of the crops if the food supply is to last through the unproductive winter months.

Three points must be kept in mind: First, that some crops need a storage place that is cold and dry; second, that some must have a cool and moist place; and third, that some must have a warm and dry place. No storage place must be damp, so ventilation is to be provided by windows or other openings.

With modern cellars and furnaces it is hard to provide all these conditions in the ordinary household; but it can be done.

Dry beans and onions want cold, dry storage. The attic or the garage will do for them.

Root crops, such as beets, carrots, parsnips, salsify, turnips and celery may be stored in a specially constructed storage room, walled off from the rest of the cellar by double walls of pressed fiber, painted to repel rats and mice. Potatoes and cabbage need a somewhat moist condition and may be placed in crates near the floor, which should be covered with dirt or sand if the cellar has a concrete floor. Pumpkins, squash and sweet potatoes can go right in the furnace room, not far from the furnace. In spite of the words of the poem, "when the frost is on the pumpkin," pumpkins should never be allowed to get frosted.

Commercial signs advertising soft drinks, candy and cigarettes should not be allowed to detract attention from the farmer's roadside market.

The handy man about the house can make blocks of wood with leg sockets in them to raise the kitchen table to the right height for working.

SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

By Jaygee

ON THE RANGE

Much has been heard of "Sportsmanship". In a seemingly cold and selfish world, wherein the maxim of laisse-faire has over countless generations ruled the relations of man to man it is a refreshing thought that sportsmanship and full considerations for the rights and interests of the other fellow are vital, active forces, ever in play, and that these forces reveal themselves in devious ways.

An incident related by George Hargrave, chairman of the rifle range committee of the Addison Fish and Game Club, may be cited in proof of the fact that there is really sportsmanship in sport, whatever else may be said of the formal world outside.

Harry Simmons, an expert rifle shot and a friend of George over many years, was opposing C. A. Miller, then U. S. Champion in a match on a Long Island range. To the surprise of the spectators and the consternation of the Champion, Simmons got off to an early lead. With consistent regularity he was punching the bullseye, while his vaunted opponent was shooting with sposmodic success.

As it happened a puffy wind of varying intensity was blowing. Miller finally came to the conclusion that his own wind allowance must be incorrect and that of his opponents correct.

He, the champion, swallowed his pride. He walked over to Simmons.

"Would you be good enough" he asked, "to tell me what your wind allowance it?"

Imagine what your temptation—or mine—would have been!

"Three and a half points", said Simmons as he extended his gun to disclose the setting.

Miller walked back. He shifted the adjustment. From then on, he was unbeatable, finally winning out by about nine points margin.

Simmons lost— but he displayed the true height of sportsmanship, as his opponent and the several hundred spectators promptly acknowlerdged. In so doing he attained to fame of a type which skill of hand and eye could not impart.

That Simmons, rated close to the top, had much to gain by defeating the champion, even at the expense of true sportsmanship, goes without saying.

Mr. Hargrave tells of Harry's visit to the American Legion meet at Bath a few years back. Walking up to the rack, he laid down two dollars with the remark, "If I don't shoot 98 this goes to the club."

With a cold gun, this was impossible even for an expert. So the crowd thought at least. He shot just—98. And picked up his two dollars.

Rifle shooting is a popular pastime throughout the country. It is mighty popular here in Addison and a big turnout is expected on the local range at the big field day next Sunday.

The sport calls for a distinctive skill and carries with it a fascination all its own which holds the interest of devotees everywhere.

"Rifle shooting promotes coordination of eye and nerve", said Mr. Hargrave in explaining something of its technique. And he added, "there is a vast difference between shot gun shooting and rifle shooting. The difference is this, The shot gun shooter swings his gun at a moving object and leads a certain number of inches. While the rifleman does not pull until the sights are in perfect alignment with the object fired at."

From personal observations at the McCarthy field, there may be technical differences between Floyd Gillespie's shot gunners and George Hargraves' riflemen. But they appear to have two things in common, zest for the game and true sportsmenship.

Robbins displayed a scintillating brand of ball behind the plate while Hallett's hitting and fielding was a feature. Bernardo and Lumozz offered the hitting highlights for the Tanners, while Darby, who relieved Bernardo on the mound, pitched excellent ball.

On Saturday morning the Addison lads squared off against the Lindley town team. The Tioga valley boys fielded perfectly and hit well. Harrison, their second baseman, fielded in league fashion, although two errors were sandwiched in with his dazzling plays.

Addison was minus several regulars and failed to click in the customary manner. Even at that they lost out by only a single point. Mathews twirled the first four innings, and Wade finished the fray.

At the State Fair in Syracuse he was adjudged the best dog of the cocker breed entered. At Hamburg he was classified as the best dog in the show, regardless of breed.

A 14¾ inch perch was hooked by Jake Kress in the Canisteo river one day last week. Just to make the competition interesting, another perch, measuring 12 inches, was landed by Ira Wright. Harry Laffkas, keeper of the archives, sharpened up his pencil when the reports came in. After dusting off the tomes and checking back for a couple of decades, Harry tells us that Jake's catch is the largest perch recorded in that time.

Elkland Wins Out By 3-2 Score

Addison Drops Final Game of Year, and Series With Tanners, on Wet Field.

In spite of the fact that rain fell steadily throughout the game, Addison and Elkland staged one of their old fashioned hot fights at Tuscarora field Sunday and Elkland pulled out a run ahead, the score being 3 to 2, and thereby proved themselves to be the big ducks in the puddle. Things started off lively, but after the first couple of innings, the old tendency to fight tooth and nail in a red hot pitchers' battle reasserted itself and the last part of the game found our old friend Lawrence Baker and John Grange fighting it out to the bitter end. Baker was very stingy of hits with men on bases and received the better support, the Elkland boys seeming to thrive on the wet going and soggy ball, while the Addison men found it hard to stick to. Don Grange started the pitching for Addison, but found himself suffering from a sore arm and was replaced by his brother John, who thus made his debut in League ball and showed all the stuff of an old leaguer. An error and a hit yielded a run during John's first inning in the box, but thereafter he refused to let an Elkland man cross the plate and toward the end he was setting the Elkland batters down with great regularity. Hewson, Brennan and LaChance poled a brace of hits each and Swan did likewise for the visitors. Taylor did some fine fielding for Elkland in spite of hard going. Riker fielded well and both LaChance and Swan caught excellent ball.

Three hits, two of which were very scratchy and an error sent Elkland off to a run lead in the first, but this did not seem alarming when Addison came right back with one on hits by Hewson and Hoyt grouped around a walk to Riffle. Elkland added another in the second on an error and a single by Taylor and from then on rested from their scoring labors. LaChance started the third with a hit. D. Grange forced George at second but was safe himself and scored directly on a hit by Hewson and some other things. Addison tried valiantly to tie the count from then on but Elkland's one run lead grew steadily larger as the innings went by and finally proved the visitors margin of victory.

The score follows:

INDUSTRY SEES HOPEFUL SIGNS, BANKERS TOLD

Leading Automobile Unit Expects to Employ More Men This Winter Than Last

MOTOR SUPPLY IN HANDS OF PUBLIC FALLING OFF

Twelve Million Years Less Transportation in Nation's Car Inventory Than Considered Normal, Manufacturer Tells Financiers

ESTIMATING that transportation in the form of automobiles now in the hands of the American public is twelve million "car-years" below normal, and that this deficit will eventually have to be made up, Richard H. Grant, vice president of the General Motors Corporation, recently told the American Bankers Association convention that employment in his company may be greater this winter than last year.

"Employment during the winter months is a very important thing," Mr. Grant said. "So far as our corporation is concerned, in November, December, January and February we will be employing at least as many and probably more men than we did this past year."

In order to gauge the outlook for next year's market his corporation, he said, attempts to set up sales indices based on intensive scientific studies in addition to observation and common sense.

"We are in the habit of looking upon an automobile not merely as an automobile but as transportation," he said. "We figure each automobile produced as six years of transportation. Then by following up records of production yearly, we get a graph which indicates what ought to be a normal inventory of transportation in the hands of the American people, and whether there are more or less miles than might be expected. According to our figures, there are about twelve million years less transportation in this inventory at the present time than has been considered normal since 1925.

The Outlook for Business

"Consequently, if we retain the same purchasing power in this country, it is quite evident that on the first upturn of business there will be a rush to replace that inventory. In developing this graph, it has come out very strongly that every third year is a big automobile year. The biggest automobile year was 1929 when 4,100,000 cars were produced for American consumption. This year the industry will produce somewhere between 1,800,000 and 1,900,000 cars. As 1932 is three years after 1929, if economic conditions were normal we could be sure we would do a tremendous business, because the third year is the time when the bulk of the replacing takes place."

He added that there are factors at work that make it uncertain how big the year will be, instancing that "money is being hoarded from lack of confidence and this takes away some purchasing power that we would otherwise have, while family budgets are being cut on account of changes in income conditions, which again means that purchasing power for the automobile, like a good many other things, will be knocked down." As a result, he said, it was necessary to measure what statistically would be a big year against a practical consideration of the curtailment of expenditures which is going on and determine how big the year will be under these circumstances.

"From a long haul standpoint, regardless of how many automobiles are sold in 1932, we are storing up a big business for the future," Mr. Grant said. "There will be fewer automobiles sold in 1931 than will go to the scrap heap. With 12,000,000 car-years out of the inventory, nine percent more gasoline was used up to August 1, 1931, than was used in 1930. With fewer automobiles, the people must have been running them faster and longer to consume the additional gasoline. This means that we have some 22,000,000 people working hard to make a fine business for our industry when there is an economic recovery.

No False Optimism

"I am not attempting to create any false optimism—I am not speaking without a statistical background. Using the best sense we can, we have drawn conclusions from the figures we have, and I am willing to make the statement that as far as the conduct of our business for the first half of 1932 is concerned, we shall set the indices somewhat higher than the actualities of 1931. We are willing to set our advertising budgets and our selling expense on that kind of indices. With economic conditions as they are, and since the obsolescence is so great and we have sunk so low in this year's sales, we figure that the first half of 1932 must necessarily be better than was the first half of 1931."

WE DO EXCELLENT JOB WORK

Addison Attorney Buys Main Street Business Block

Attorney Charles L. Crane the first of the week completed the purchase of the Westlake block on Main street of this village. Negotiations of the transaction were completed by telegraph on Monday, with the former owner, Mrs. Florence Westlake Wheeler of Los Angeles, Cal.

The new property acquired by Mr. Crane comprises a three-story block with two stores fronting on the west side of the street. One of these stores was lately occupied by the Horace G. Crane Clothing Company, while the other houses the Coston Company grocery, Charles E. Austin, being the local proprietor. The vacant store will be immediately redecorated, and offered for rent.

This move by Attorney Crane, amply shows his confidence in the soundness of Addison real estate as an investment. Mr. Crane believes that the tendency of the times is for manufacturers to drift out of the congested cities into smaller towns, and this drift is pretty sure to gradually enhance the value of village real estate. During the depression period when practically all stocks, bonds and similar investments have shrunk enormously in book value, the tangibility of real estate has rendered it less subject to depreciation.

Supervisory Candidate Prominent Business Man

Elmer C. Hawkins, nominated at the Democratic caucus for supervisor of the town of Addison is a prominent business man and highly respected citizen of the community. Although the ADVERTISER is a Republican paper and accords complete and whole hearted support to the candidacy of Walter M. Goff, Republican nominee for re-election, we are pleased to pay a well deserved tribute to his Democratic adversary.

Mr. Hawkins has been a resident of Addison since 1921. During all of the intervening period he has been associated with Lewis F. Hill, as dealers in agricultural products, farm machinery and automobiles. He has served with distinction as a member of the Board of Education for several years and has been active in support of all community enterprises.

The Democratic nominee was born in the town of Canisteo on June 15, 1886, son of Frank and Annette Oakley Hawkins. He attended school in Cameron and his entire early life was spent in that locality. In 1911 Mr. Hawkins purchased a farm in Thurston, where he resided until moving to Addison ten years later. While a resident of Thurston, he made his entry into politics as inspector of elections, this being in 1918. Two years later he received the Democratic nomination for supervisor in the town of Thurston and was successful in the contest which ensued. It was near the end of his two-year term as supervisor that he removed from Thurston to Addison.

In 1908 Mr. Hawkins was married to Miss Crystal Turner of Cameron Mills, who died several years ago. A daughter, Crystal Hawkins, born to them, died in infancy. In 1930, Mr. Hawkins was married to Miss Madge Shumway of Addison. A son, William Elmer, is two years of age.

Mr. Hawkins has been a member of Cameron Mills Lodge No. 547, F. & A. M., for many years and is a past master of that organization. He is a member of Tuscarora Chapter, No. 273, Order of Eastern Star and for several years past has served as patron of the society. A signal honor came to him in 1931 when he was appointed assistant grand lecturer of Steuben district, O. E. S. He is also a member of the Presbyterian Church of Addison.

of German aggression, and since that is what it would prefer to believe, the statement is accepted as fact. If the Germans have done it twice, may they not do it again? thinks that Frenchman. Now let us recall again his desire for security, security against foreign aggression as well as against economic ills, and we see that the aims of the French naturally will not coincide with ours. We are isolated, without the possibility of attack except by sea, but the only nation that could challenge our navy is England, that she would, however, is unthinkable. The French see across the borden a histile nation with a population half again as large as theirs, and ever increasing, while theirs is static. They realize their present superiority is highly artificial, and the war cries of Germany's ruler are not calculated to allay their fears.

But in spite of all their alliances, all their scheming and planning, the French cannot maintain their leadership long. Before too many years pass there is bound to come a new line-up of powers in Europe; then, unless lady luck favors them again as she did in 1918, France will drop back as a second rate power. She is conservative when the order of the day is change, she is satisfied, when the rest of the continent seethes with discontent. But there is more than that. In the long run a democracy can be a leader only to the extent that her people are leaders. She can be strong only as her people are strong.

Let us now examine her people. We have seen that those of peasant stock predominate, that she has no class of people as has England who are trained to rule. That she will develop such a class is very unlikely, for families are small among those who occupy high positions in the government and in business, and only they could afford to give their children such a training. France is destined to remain a democracy in fact as well as in history, with the people actually ruling; but what is she doing to train her future rulers. Nothing! To be sure she passed a law that all children must attend school until they are thirteen but it has never been enforced. Another factor in considering her population that may some day be of great importance is the introduction into France of African blood. Great numbers of Moroccan troops are quartered in France during the period of their military training and in a country of the immorality of France that means the birth of several thousand half-breeds each year. Although this foreign blood may be in no way inferior to her own, still the mixture, especially under the conditions that are taking place, will do nothing to add strength to the race. More examples of the short-sightedness of her peasant mind.

Those Americans who are pro-French will charge that I have treated France unfairly by not telling of the beauties of her country and by not lauding the good qualities of her people. France, however, has set herself up as a leader, and must be judged as such. Our treatment of France must of necessity differ from that of a nation like Spain which does not aspire to European supremacy. The French have declared themselves desirous of ruling Europe, it is our duty to judge their ability.

Blood-Thirsty Mosquitoes

Over the eastern hill rose the sun, as thirsty as a bear after a long chase by a hunter. As the sun kept drinking and drinking, the first thing the mosquitoes knew, the swamp where they lived was dry.

So the mosquitoes had a council at twilight and tried to figure where they could find something to drink. For when they lighted upon the surface of a pool in the stream, Mr. Bass, the fish, came up and swallowed them before they could fly away.

One old mosquito, who was extra fat, only smiled to hear the troubles of the other mosquitoes; and when called upon for his opinion he told the others his secret.

Under a sheltering oak each afternoon, he said, he found a fat Cayuga Indian sleeping; and when he was thirsty, he just flew over and poked his nose into the Cayuga's leg and my, did his blood taste good!

The other mosquitoes were glad to hear about the sleeping Cayuga, and as the council broke up, one little mosquito arose and said, "It is wrong to pick on the sleeping Cayuga for he has done nothing to harm the mosquitoes". But the other mosquitoes only launghed at the good hearted little mosquito.

Now overhead in a tree above the mosquito council sat a wise old owl and he agreed wih the wisdom of the little mosquito who would not bite the sleeping Cayuga. And so, as the council broke up, he called the little mosquito into his wigwam.

"Because you are considerate of others, I am going to help save the sleeping Cayuga from the mosquitoes."

So with his beak, he begain to pull the little mosquito wings so that they were long and flat; and a little bee helper of the owl brought colors from the flowers and painted the wings all colors of the rainbow. Then the bee took wax and added a long piece to the mosquito's body. And ever aftewards, we have had these harmless dragon flies who can protect sleeping Cayugas for they eat bloodthirsty mosquitoes.

What is This New-Fangled "Skeet?" Hundreds of Southern Tier Folks Are Asking. The Paragraphs Below Give the Answer

A new skeet field, one of the first in this section of the country, has recently been equipped by the Addison Fish and Game Club. This new and fascinating sport will be introduced to the local public at the big field day on Sunday next.

Interest in the sport is running high. Little is known regarding the sport, however, except by the limited number who have seen it elsewhere or who attended the practice shoots of the last two Sundays.

The public is asking — what is Skeet? When did it originate? How is a field arranged, etc.? The ADVERTISER is indebted to E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., for information and illustrations enabling us to answer, in the paragraphs below, some of these questions going the rounds.

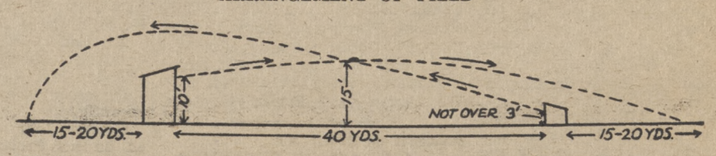
Skeet is an all-season sport for shot gun shooters which is rapidly gaining in popularity. The game, invented and developed some years ago by W. H. Foster, editor of National Sportsman, was designed to afford an informal variety of practice for field shooting by means of clay targets and traps. It is conceded by everyone to be the nearest to field conditions of any form of clay-bird shooting, and has long since passed the limits of its original idea. Men and women, who never go into the field play it regularly and find the game sufficient unto itself.

From a simple start and without any preconceived plan, the progress of Skeet and its growth in popularity have been phenominal. It is one of the few sports able to maintain its strides during the past two years. Twenty-three state Skeet tournaments were held during 1932 and shooters from every one of the United States recently completed a National Skeet stakes contest in which more than one and one half million shots were fired to determine high guns in the "novice" and experienced classes.

Skeet is a sport in which the modern woman can find unlimited entertainment and recreation. Many women enjoy field shooting and this game offers a splendid opportunity to develop skill in the use of the shot gun.

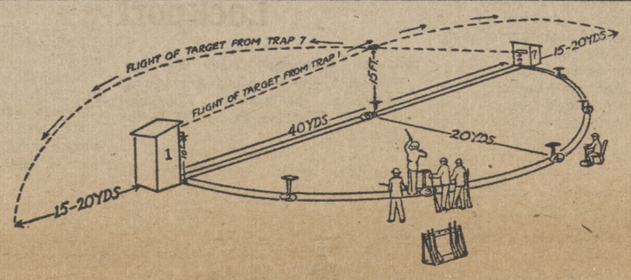
ARRANGEMENT OF FIELD



How a Skeet Field is Arranged

Skeet traps may be installed in almost any field or waste land, of perhaps two hundred by five hundred yards in size, if the background is such that the targets can be seen plainly in flight. The traps should be arranged so that the shooting position faces toward the north or northeast, and are set up forty yards apart, so as to throw targets toward each other, with a maximum elevation of fifteen feet at the center. The 1933 N.S.S.A. rules state that the left hand (No. 1) trap be placed on a platform at a height which locates the bottom of the target door at not less than ten feet from the ground. The other (No. 7) trap is placed at the ground level with the target door not more than three feet from the ground. This order may be reversed, however, if the field requires it, and the low trap placed at the left hand end of the semi-circle and the high trap at the right. Seven shooting positions equidistant from each other are then marked around the arc of the semi-circle twenty yards from the eighth shooting position, which is located on a straight line exactly between the two traps.

The shooters start at No. 1 station, guns held in a informal "field" position, and at their call of "Mark" or "Ready" a target is thrown first from the high trap and then from the low trap. They continue around the stations in rotation, shooting at two targets from each position. The final part of the event consists of four pairs of doubles, two targets thrown simultaneously, to be shot from Stations 1, 2, 6 and 7, and an optional target, the twenty-fifth, which, as the name implies, is any target the shooter may designate.



RULES AND REGULATIONS

Eight rules and regulations govern conduct of the game. They are:

1. Loaded Guns on the Field—No loaded gun shall be allowed on the field except in the hands of a shooter when in position to shoot.

2. Number of Shells in the Gun—During the shooting of single targets the shooter shall put but one shell in his gun at a time. More than two shells shall not be put in his gun at any time. (see ground rule.)

3. The Shooting position — The shooter shall not raise his gun to his shoulder to shoot until the target is seen in the air. When ready to shoot he shall take his position at the shooting station with his gun in an informal field position. This position shall be defined as one in which the referee, standing at least ten feet directly to the side of the shooter from which he shoots, can see some part of the stock of the gun below or behind any part of the shooter's arm; and that, in which no part of the stock of the gun shall be closer to the shoulder of the shooter than the width of the referee's hand. Shoulder in this connection is construed to mean that area covered by the butt of the gun when the gun is in actual shooting position. The shooter shall then order a target which shall be released by the puller any time after the order is heard within an indefinite period not to exceed three seconds. The referee shall delay and test the shooting position of any shooter about whom he is in question, and shall count any target as lost when the shooter's position is not according to rule when the target appears.

4. Shooting at Irregular Targets—No shooter may shoot at any broken target, or at any target which varies noticeably from the prescribed line of flight. If the shooter shoots at such a target he shall be required to shoot over again and shall abide by the results of his second shot. The referee shall decide when this is necessary.

5. Dead and Lost Targets—Before declaring a target dead, the referee shall see the piece broken from the target. "Dusted" targets shall not be counted as hits.

6. Shooting Bounds— To get the most out of Skeet, all targets should be shot at when nearly over Station 8. No hits shall be counted when made after the target from Trap 1 has reached a point over the front of Station 7 traphouse, or after the target from the trap at Station 7 has reached a point over the front of Station 1 traphouse. When the shooting is done from Station 8 no hits shall be counted that are made after the target passes over that station.

7. Position at Station 8— When shooting from Station 8, the shooter must stand near enough to the station marker so that his forward hand will be over the station.

8 The Shooting of Doubles—Unless the shooter about to shoot a double announces to the referee that he will shoot at the incoming target of the double first, and the outgoing target second, the outgoing target shall be shot at first and the incoming target second.

Ventilation System Need Not Cost Much

College of Agriculture Issues a Bulletin To Deal With This Winter Problem

With the approach of winter comes the old problem of poultry house ventilation. Many farmers would like to make their layers more comfortable during the cold weather but feel they cannot afford expensive ventilation equipment.

To meet this problem the agricultural engineering department of the state college of agriculture has prepared a bulletin describing a simple, inexpensive ventilation system which can be adapted to every type of poultry house.

"Forget everything about elaborate ventilation systems and think only of the comfort of your birds", suggests Professor F. L. Fairbanks, who together with Professor A. M. Goodman prepared the bulletin.

Your birds would be more comfortable if there were no cold drafts. Why not eliminate drafts entirely by simply directing the air that enters the pen? Now you have half of your system. The other half consists of getting the excess moisture, the dust, and odors out of the pen. You can construct an opening or out-take which will always be an out-take no matter which way the wind blows or how cold the weather gets."

The application of these principles of out-takes and in-takes is explained in the bulletin, which contains a number of helpful drawings. A post card addressed to the office of publication, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N. Y., will bring it.

How What and Why?

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

"Cricket on the Hearth"

Mrs. T. H. O. writes: "I have a cricket in my house. I like its chirping, but some members of the family say it will cause damage. Will you please tell me about it?"

W. E. Blauvelt says that two kinds of crickets are likely to enter houses: the pale brown European house cricket, which is the "cricket on the hearth" celebrated in Charles Dickens' story of that name; and the common, black, field cricket. The house cricket may breed in the house; the field cricket ordinarily enters merely for shelter. Crickets sometimes become decidedly abundant on garbage dumps, and then are likely to invade nearby houses. Some persons are much annoyed by the monotone of their chirping, and sometimes these crickets cause considerable damage by feeding on clothing and other fabrics. They also enter pantries and eat any food they can reach. Crickets may be destroyed in dwellings by blowing pyrethrum powder into their hiding places and haunts. Powdered sodium fluoride is more effective, but somewhat poisonous to man and should not be put where it will get into food, or where children or pets can get it.

Cost of Bulletins

Mrs. A. L. writes: "Someone has told me that the publications of the colleges at Cornell can not be sent free to the citizens of New York Is this true?

Dean Carl E. Ladd, of the College of Agriculture, points out that a recent state law requires that, as a measure of economy, public documents cannat be delivered free but must be sold at a price to cover the cost of publishing. The law, however, permits of some modifications; and the state authorities have approved an interpretation of the law by which single copies of the bulletins of the colleges can be sent free to residents of New York state. Extra copies, or supplies of bulletins in quantity, as well as bulletins sent to persons outside of the state of New York, are charged for in accordance with the provisions of the law.

Potato Crop Is Improved

But New York Estimated Yield is Still One-Fourth Less Than Last Year

New York state's 1933 potato crop improved during the month of August and is now estimated at 20,685,000 bushels, according to the September estimate of the United States Department of Agricuture. However, the 1933 crop is still twenty-seven per cent or 7,665,000 bushels less than last year's yield.

Improvement was also shown in the Maine and Pennsylvania crops, and in the total crop for the United States. Maine now reports no more than a three per cent reduction and Pennsylvania, a twelve per cent reduction. The total crop for the United States is estimated to be 293,585,000 bushels, which is eighteen per cent less than the 1932 crop and about seventy-one million bushels below the five year average.

An average reduction of 34 per cent, according to W. C. Hopper of the New York state college of agriculture, is predicted for the twelve states which usually do not produce enough potatoes for their own use. The crop in these twelve states is forecast at about 28,000,000 bushels, compared to 42,000,000 bushels in 1932, and 38,500,000 bushels for the five-year average. Of this group of states, several in the central section of the United States anticipate unusually low yields. However, Connecticut and Massochusetts forecast yields which will exceed the 1932 crop and the five-year averages for those two states.

No Tax on Own Wheat

Mr. N. P. C. says that when he took some of his wheat to be milled for his own use, the miller attempted to make more than the usual charge, to cover the cost of the processing tax. Was the miller justified in this?

Lincoln D. Kelsey, at the College of Agriculture, says that the miller was not justified in making such a charge. The handbook of organization and instructions for applying the agricultural adjustment act to wheat, distinctly says, "No tax will be collected on wheat processed by or for the producer for his own use out of his own production, nor on wheat distributed to charitable organizations,"

Select Potatoes in Field For Exhibit Purposes

A first class potato exhibit cannot be selected from the bin, it must must be selected from the field. For that reason the Steuben County farm bureau urges potato growers to save and properly store potatoes for the winter show.

A few simple rules will serve as a guide in making the proper selection. The best size for show purposes are potatoes weighing from 8 to 12 ounces. Tubers that are true to type and normal as to shape should be chosen. It goes without saying that they should be free of all defects such as cuts and bruises, scab and black scurf. A light colored skin is preferred.

About a bushel of this kind of potatoes should be gathered in a crate or basket lined with burlap and placed in cool, dark storage. When the dirt is entirely dry and the skin hardened the potatoes can be carefully brushed with a soft brush and then placed in permanent storage.

Steuben County potato growers are interested in two big potato shows, that of the Steuben County Potato Growers' Convention and the meeting of the Empire State Potato Club. Both are held during the winter and substantial cash prizes are offered as awards in the potato show.

Give Bull a Yard And a Plaything

Let Him Exercise Safely to Maintain His Health and Vigor.

"The old saying, 'A bull is a necessary nuisance', need not be true if a farmer has a safe bull yard and breeding stall," says Professor A. M. Goodman of the state college of agriculture.

A good bull-yard will confine the bull safely and provide shelter from bad weather; it will keep the bull strong and virile by allowing him a chance for exercise; it will facilitate herd breeding.

The yard should be constructed of good posts, nine feet long, set in the ground three feet and extending above the ground six feet. Rough planks, poles, or other strong, cheap material should be used for the fence, which should be spiked to the posts on the inside, or the side next to the bull. A breeding rack in a good breeding stall, the entrance of which is controlled by a gate, is of vital importance.

Diagrams and specific instructions for building the yard and stall are given in a mimeographed statement, number 180, which Professor Goodman has prepared. A post card addressed to the office of publication, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N. Y., will bring it.

"A bull will take more exercise if he is given something to play with", suggests Professor Goodman. A keg, a log, or a steel drum, he says, will encourage the bull to move about. Or place a strong post six feet tall in the middle of the year and to the top of this fasten a chain about two feet long. To the lower end of the chain fasten a keg or old milk can. The bull will play with this by the hour.

Never turn electricity on or off when you are standing in water or even on a damp floor.

Hawkins Named For Supervisor By Democrats

for all places on the ticket were made as follows: Superintendent of highways, Ira Halninen; town clerk, Florence Coakley Newman; assessors, William Cooper for four years, Eugene Tompkins for two years; justices of the peace, John M. Northrup and John Nichols.

When nominations for collector were called for, the names of Mrs. Mary McAndrew, Edward Hogue and Miss Margaret Hogue were placed before the caucus. Lattimer Brewster rising to second the nomination of Miss Margaret Hogue, remarked in part as follows, "Miss Hogue, has been a loyal, faithful and hard working Democrat. Her father before her was a life-time Democrat and served with distinction for many years as supervisor of this town. - - - - She is conscientious, efficient and thoroughly capable of doing the work and it is a pleasure to second the nomination." Miss Hogue was not present at the caucus and the question was raised as to whether she would accept the nomination if offered. Her brother, Edward Hogue, whose name had also been presented for the office, arose to request that his own name be withdrawn and to state his belief that Miss Hogue would not desire the nomination, requesting also that her name be withdrawn. The nomination for collector then went to Mrs. McAndrew without opposition, this completing the slate.

A resolution was then passed authorizing the county committee, consisting of John O'Keefe, Russell B. Allen, Timothy C. Tobin and Charles Hubbs, to act as a town committee. A committee to fill vacancies was appointed, consisting of Timothy C. Tobin, Lattimer Brewster and Hugh McDevitt. It was voted that Edwin Morris and Dennis O'Keefe be suggested to the town board as Democratic inspectors of election in the first district, and that Eugene Wade and Hugh McDevitt be suggested in the second district.

Before adjournment, James Mullaney, the chairman, addressed the gathering in part as follows: "I have always voted the Democratic ticket. It has made no difference "who" or "when". I have always worked for the success of the Democratic party. - - - - We are the minority party in this community and we need every vote to win. I ask every one of you to get out and work for the candidates we have nominated here tonight. They are all good Democrats and exemplary citizens. They deserve your earnest support. Go out and work for them from now until election day - - - -"

Lattimer Brewster stated his belief that the town committee frequently met without a full attendance. He emphasized the responsibilities of membership on the committee and called for complete cooperation of each committee member, along with the rank and file of the party.
